Identity.
The bird that soars on highest wing, Bunks off the ground her lowly nest,
And she that at dusk most sweetly sing,
Sings in the shade, when all things rest.

He said that wears the brightest crown,
 Its deepest adoration bend,
 Its weight of glory bows him down
 The more when mortals soul ascends, Secure the throne itself must be The footstool of humility

Gloves and Cigs.
 "I must really have a new pair of gloves," said Mrs. Morris to her husband, as they sat together at tea.
 "Morris had been reading the evening paper, but he let it down and looked across at her."

"My wife enforced and was about to answer me," he said, "but she told that her husband had no money." He then turned away without saying another word.

“But you have forgotten, June. It was more than a month since I bought my last pair of shoes, and I have been on a great deal as you know in the time.”

“Cumby,” said Mr. George, taking up the paper again,

“For about 15 minutes there was a silent prayer continuing between you and the boys.”

"Business is a dull job," he said "sometimes I do not know where to look for money. I expect to meet my expense."

His wife looked up with a smile in her eye.

as a "original" as I said. I went without a new silk dress that winter because the one I got last spring would answer, I thought, for January and February. My old benighted notions returned. As I got to the gloves, we know you are very particular about my having gloves always on, and so I made it appear

He'll borrow a new one if this one be true and feel just more ashamed of it - wonder how every like most men he is too proud to confess he wrong except in our case - like took out his pocket book and said - how much will cost you or a vest, nothing gloves only - but all the other things he'll make you an allowance

He said to me, "Do not ask me for money when ever you want a pair of gloves or a new handkerchief."

Mrs. Marks did not reply instantly, for she determined to keep her temper, but the quick

At last she said, But how much do you depend on my wages?
This was a home thrust, for Mr. Peters was a fastidious smoker, and consumed twice as much as a needless luxury as the gum he usually took. He picked up the paper and made

"I don't wish you to give up smoking, since you enjoy it so much," said she, "but surely cigars are no more necessary to a gentleman than are gloves and handkerchiefs to a lady. A few expensive pounds in the one is just as wise as ten pounds for the other."

She brought home a box every three weeks and each box cost her about twenty-four shillings, which at the end of the year, amounted to more than twenty pounds.

...her advantage, and smiling to herself
...proved it. "If you had counted up,"
...as I have spent shilling you have given
...time for gloves, handkerchiefs, shoes, and ribbons,
...board, during a year, you would find it amount
...in ten pounds, and if you had kept a state ...ment of what your cigars cost, you would see

That — can reflect in my statement as to the price "Twenty you do." It can't be," said the husband, and determined not to be convinced.
"Let us make a bargain," replied the wife,
"I will give you twenty pounds to buy garlic for you, and ten pounds to purchase gloves for me. I promise faithfully to keep both these until correctly with this stipulation that "This agreed I will pay quarterly, and commence to night." And he took out his purse and counted seven pounds ten shillings into his wife's hand.

She continued during the year to supply her husband with, as and, at the end rendered an account, by which it appeared that Mrs. Morris had taken away twenty two pounds and twelve shillings, his wife had spent only eight pounds and six shillings, gloves, handkerchiefs and shoes the two pounds and

Mr. Morris paid the balance with a long tance but without a word of comment. He has ere since given of his own accord the ten pounds allowance to his wife

Results of Intelligent Farming.
Mr. Webber Bartlett of East Diamond, recently brought to this market his last year's crop of potatoes which he sold at eight shillings per bushel. They were of the early blue variety,—the best for table use,—and perfectly sound and fresh. Mr. B. informs us that His crop of potatoes is never injured by the frost, that dreaded disease which has destroyed crops with a threat last six years on the average once in half a century. He grows the potato crop throughout the country. His remedy for the disease is to plant yearly. He allows his seed potatoes to sprout in the house, planting by placing them in flour barrels for a warm place then plants, weeds and works.

no other preparation, but the sprinkling on a little plaster. He died for this season was planned about the 25th of April, hence which time the ground has been frozen over. The potatoes are now up one or two inches and look well.

An Irish correspondent in Oregon writes us that the precious metals are so scarce out that way, that the $20 dollar gold pieces are made of copper.
